

Twenty years after recovering its seafrent, Barcelona is taking on a challenge that is comparable in its impact and its ambition: reconnecting the city with its mountains. The launch of the "Ideas Competition for the Gates to Collserola Natural Park" marked the beginning of an unprecedented reflection in our city, focused on the transition between natural spaces and the urban fabric. NATURBAN compiles the collective efforts that resulted from the ideas competition and presents the key questions for the future of the city's re-naturalisation. The 111 proposals contained in this volume, in addition to the input from experts regarding ten key concepts, are Barcelona's contribution to the debate on the relationship between the urban milieu and the natural environment in our contemporary metropolis.
